MISSOULA--

After less than two weeks of practice, the University of Montana football team is working so well as a unit that Grizzly coach Jack Swarthout has eliminated the morning practices.

"When we reach this point of working together, we know the afternoon practice is all we need to get the team ready for the season," Swarthout said.

With UM's first game coming up Sept. 4, Swarthout is pleased with the progress of the defending Big Sky Conference champions and confident he's fielding a team capable of winning a third straight crown.

The Grizzlies open against the University of South Dakota in an 8 p.m. contest at Memorial Stadium in Great Falls.
